NOV -2 1925

Buster's grandfather invites him and Mary Jane for the week end but states in his letter that the dog is unwelcome. Buster makes an unsuccessful attempt to smuggle the dog in a suit case but Tige manages to get there in time to kiss grandpa, who becomes furious when he sees the dog but is won over when the dog chases a troublesome salesman who carries a brief case.

When the directors of the bank come to the house for a meeting, all carrying brief cases, Tige's duty is plain, and he carries the day by making shreds of all the directors.

Tige is tied to a tree and in his efforts to break away, shakes down a hornet's nest. The insert follow Tige until he reaches grandpa. Then the insects transfer their affections to the old man who runs until he comes to a saddle horse upon which he hopes to elude the bugs. But the horse gets stung and kicks grandpa high in the air. He lands in a wheelbarrow manned by Buster.
